Club teams from around the world, including the England's Manchester United and Japan's own Gamba Osaka, will gather in Japan to compete for the championship in Yokohama's International Stadium. Egypt's Al Ahly recently triumphed in Africa, deciding the final member of the competition. Mexico's Pachuca, Ecuador's Liga de Quito, Australia's Adelaide United, and Waitakere United of New Zealand round out the tournament. Each team has proven their worthiness by triumphing in their respective leagues, but will the newcomers from Asia and Africa be able to triumph over the traditional strongholds of Europe and South America?

The final games of this popular event have already sold out in the Japanese market, but football fans visiting Japan can still pick up seats at JAPANiCAN.com. Six-day and three-day tours are available, including accommodation and either Category 1 or Category 4 seating. Both tours include tickets for the final and third-place playoff, with the six-day tour also including the semifinal match and fifth-place playoff for a total of four games. Prices range from JPY 44,900 for Category 4 seating on the three-day tour to JPY 139,000 for Category 1 seating on the six-day tour.
